

CHASE CONTEMPORARY

THE PLAN, IN PLAIN ENGLISH

A NEW WEBSITE.
AN ENGINE BEHIND IT.

What we are building, what it does for the gallery, and the few things we need from you.

TODAY

WHERE SALES SLIP AWAY

Right now, when a collector wants a piece, their message lands in one shared email box.

No one owns it. Some get answered fast. Some never get answered at all. And every single one can be a five-thousand-dollar sale, or a million-dollar sale.

The old website is gone too. About fifty shows: Hambleton, Valencia, Taupin, Scharf. Erased. People still search for them and find nothing.

One saved sale pays for this entire project.

THE BIG IDEA

ONE WEBSITE. ONE BOOK.

We are building two things that work as one:

1 A WEBSITE WORTHY OF THE ART

Beautiful, museum-grade, and built to sell. Prints and editions can be bought on the spot. Important works start a conversation.

2 ONE BOOK THAT RUNS THE GALLERY

Every artwork, every collector, every deal, every dollar, written down in one place instead of scattered across emails and memory.

3 A TEAM THAT NEVER DROPS A LEAD

Every inquiry has an owner, a clock, and a next step. Nothing slips.

And the heart of the business does not change. The artists, the taste, the way you buy and sell: untouched.

STEP ONE

NEVER MISS A COLLECTOR

- 1 A collector presses "Inquire" on a painting.
- 2 The team's phones buzz that second.
Not tomorrow. Not "when someone checks the inbox."
That second.
- 3 Whoever picks it up sees the full picture.
Who is asking, which work, what they looked at, what they have bought before. All on one card.
- 4 The collector hears back in minutes.
From a person. With the right answer, and a way to pay if they are ready.

WHY IT MATTERS

Answer inside five minutes and a buyer is 21 times more likely to become a real conversation.

STEP TWO

MONEY, ON THE COLLECTOR'S TERMS

When a collector is ready, we take the money however they want to give it:

CARD	for editions and deposits
BANK TRANSFER	the easy middle, five to a hundred fifty thousand
WIRE	for large works, instructions sent automatically
PAYMENT PLANS	so more collectors can say yes
A LINK BY TEXT	sent while they are still on the phone. They tap, they pay, done

THE HOLD

A collector who says “let me think about it” puts down a small refundable deposit, and the work is held for 72 hours. “A hold has been placed on this work” is the most honest urgency in the business, and it turns maybes into sales.

THE WHOLE GALLERY, IN ONE PLACE

Every artwork, with its images and provenance. Every collector and everything they ever bought or asked about. Every deal, every payment, every dollar. One book.

And you can ask it questions the way you would ask a person:

"Who bought street art under fifty thousand near Palm Beach in the last three years?"

TEN SECONDS LATER: YOUR NEXT INVITE LIST.

And the book works for you. When a new piece comes in, it already knows which collectors will care, and it writes the note to each of them. A person reads it, approves it, and only then does it send.

Who sees what is up to you. You see everything. Each person on the team sees their own deals and their own numbers.

History goes in first: past sales, past invoices, past clients. The book is only as smart as its memory.

THE LEGACY

YOUR HISTORY, BACK ONLINE

We found the old pages preserved in internet archives: about fifty shows, from the Chelsea years to the SoHo flagship. We are bringing every one of them back.

Hambleton. Valencia. Taupin. Scharf. Feuerman. The fairs, the press, the story.

WHY BOTHER?

Because people don't just ask Google anymore. They ask their phone, and their phone asks an AI.

When someone asks "where do I buy a Kenny Scharf?", the answer should be Chase Contemporary.

The more of your history that lives online, the more often the gallery is the answer. The shows. The press. Your eye for artists like Andres Valencia. Your past sells for you, around the clock.

VISIBILITY

WHAT YOU SEE

One screen, live, any time you look. Not month-end reports, but answers to the questions an owner actually asks:

WHO IS ASKING ABOUT WHAT

every open conversation, and who owns it

WHO ANSWERS FASTEST

and who closes, and who discounts too much

WHAT IS MOVING

by artist, by size, by price, and what is stuck

WHERE THE MONEY IS

paid, owed, and on the way, to the dollar

When everyone can see the board, the floor manages itself. And once we can see what your best closer does differently, we teach it to everyone.

COMMISSIONS THAT SPLIT THEMSELVES

The commission structure is agreed once, up front: who earns what share of every sale. That agreement lives in the book, as a rule.

The moment a payment lands, the split happens on its own. Each person's share is driven straight into their pool. Installments and partial payments too.

Nobody calculates. Nobody reconciles. Nothing waits for month-end.

No month-end spreadsheet archaeology. No disputes. No “I thought we agreed...”

Salespeople who trust their number to the penny push harder. And because every discount is on the record, the quiet leak most galleries never see becomes money you keep.

THE RULES

WHAT THIS IS NOT

NO CHATBOTS.

No robot ever speaks to a collector. Ever.

NOTHING SENDS ITSELF.

Every email the system prepares is read and approved by a person before it goes anywhere.

NO MACHINE QUOTES A PRICE.

Price-on-request means a person picks up the phone.

YOUR LIST NEVER LEAVES.

Collector names and numbers stay inside the gallery. They are the crown jewels and we treat them that way.

The machinery does the remembering, the timing, and the paperwork. People do the selling.

THE ROLLOUT

FIRST WINS IN DAYS

STOP THE LEAK

WEEKS 1-3

Every inquiry gets an owner, a fast answer, and a follow-up. We dig the last years of inquiries out of the inbox and revive every one that went quiet.

TAKE THE MONEY

WEEKS 3-8

Card, bank transfer, wire, plans, holds, payment links. Collectors can commit the moment they are ready, on whatever terms suit the work.

COMPOUND

WEEKS 8-16

The beautiful new website. The history restored. The dashboard. The commissions that split themselves. Every sale makes the next one easier.

Measured before promised: the first thing we build is the counting, so every claim gets proven with your real numbers.

FROM YOU

FOUR THINGS, NONE OF THEM HARD

01 AN HOUR OF TALK

Addresses, who is on the team, which artists are current. The facts only you know.

02 THE KEYS

Your office manager can hand us the website and email access. We take it from there.

03 YOUR STORIES

An hour of you talking, like the Schachter interview, becomes pages that sell for years.

04 YOUR EYE

You approve every design and every word before the world sees it.

Competitors have an inbox.
Chase Contemporary will have an operating system.
